Seventeen year old Leeza Lane appears to lead the perfect plush life in Los Angeles until her father, the creator of a multi-billion dollar software company, humiliates their family. The publicity and shame become too much for Leeza and her mother to handle, so they move from Los Angeles to seclusion in Boulder, Colorado.

She changes her style and even enrolls in school as “Leah Lane” to hide her old identity. Although she’s devastated over her father’s betrayal, she finally feels free to express herself the way she’s always wanted. Since Leeza now appears different, she’s shunned by the type of people she used to associate with.

Leeza falls for the star quarterback, Brandon Jennings, who’s the type of guy she swore she’d never date again. Brandon loves that she’s different and believes her to be his true lucky charm; however, his friends don’t share the same affection.

Life becomes more complicated for Leeza, and when the paparazzi find her new hiding place, chaos breaks out. Will she be able to mesh parts of her old life with her new? Will her friends and Brandon believe the girl they’ve grown to care for is truly “Leah?” Find out in this sweet story where bravery to stand up for what is right speaks louder than words, showing the real meaning of love.
